Seventh-graders donate time to help at shelter

SPRINGBORO — Four seventh-graders from Springboro Junior High School recently showed their commitment to helping others by performing a community service project at the St. Vincent de Paul Hotel gateway shelter.

Taylor Preibe, Faith Smith, Margo Brandenburg and Kristen Hehman spent several hours at the shelter, organizing baby supplies in the shelter's pantry area and helping serve dinner to the families staying at the shelter.

Located on Apple Street in Dayton, St. Vincent de Paul Hotel provides overnight shelter, meals and other services to more than 200 homeless men, women and families every day.

Students finish terra-cotta soldier project

SPRINGBORO — Social studies students at Springboro Intermediate participated in a terra-cotta soldier archaeological project working in groups to unearth pieces of a model terra-cotta soldier from a block of sediment.

Once this task was completed the students glued, filled, sanded and painted the soldiers to repair and restore them.

In conjunction with the excavation, the students completed a research project about the terra-cotta soldiers as they read the book, "Terra-Cotta Soldiers: Army of Stone" by Arlan Dean.

Elementary hosts Career Week speakers

SPRINGBORO — "Exploring Careers" was the theme of last week's career week at Dennis Elementary. The students were encouraged to make posters and decorate classroom doors.

The speakers shared the tools of their trades and invited questions from the students. The students also had the opportunity to dress for their future careers. This gave them practice in matching their clothing to their dreams of a future vocation.

The week concluded with vehicle day. Dennis Elementary welcomed eighteen people and their vehicles.

Each class visited the individual vehicles and listened as the drivers explained how the vehicles were used in their careers.

Finally, one member from each classroom was given the opportunity to take an airplane ride.
